

Internship Program Admissions

Date Program Tables are updated: 8/29/2019

Briefly describe in narrative form important information to assist potential applicants in assessing their likely fit with your program. This description must be consistent with the program's policies on intern selection and practicum and academic preparation requirements:

greater flexibility, resilience, and adaptive functioning. The therapeutic relationship also provides the possibility of new relational experiences, which can allow patients to explore and gain new understandings of themselves and their life stories.

Interns receive training in a breadth of theories and techniques, including evidenced-based treatment (e.g., Mentalization-Based Therapy). Seminars focus on honing interns' skills in applying theories from classical models of psychoanalysis, ego psychology, British object relations, interpersonal psychoanalysis, contemporary relational psychoanalysis with an emphasis on the intersubjective field, Jungian analysis, attachment theory, developmental neuropsychology, mentalization theory, and social justice models to current clinical practice. Interns provide services in the following modalities: individual, group, and family psychotherapy; risk assessment, case management, collateral work, and consultation; crisis intervention and management; and psychological assessment. Interns work with youth and families experiencing oppression on many systemic levels (e.g., race, class, educational) with severe emotional and behavioral challenges, as well as youth with developmental disabilities, such as autism spectrum disorders.

Does the program require that applicants have received a minimum number of hours of the following at time of application? If Yes, indicate how many:

Total Direct Contact Intervention Hours	N/A		Amount:
Total Direct Contact Assessment Hours	N/A		Amount:

Describe any other required minimum criteria used to screen applicants:

Students who are interested in psychodynamic community-based treatment and students who are interested in play therapy are strongly encouraged to apply. We are also looking for applicants with the ability to engage in treatment with high risk youth and youth and families experiencing oppression on many systemic levels (e.g., race, class, educational).
